

Course Name: Fundamentals of Cryptography

Cryptography is the science of secure communication. It involves techniques for encoding and decoding information to protect its confidentiality and integrity. Fundamentals include encryption (converting plaintext to ciphertext) and decryption (reversing the process), using algorithms, keys, and mathematical principles. Cryptography is vital for securing data in modern computing and communication systems.

